A Well-Authorized Case of Trance.

Near the battle-field of Monmouth stands the First Presbyterian Church of Freehold, erected in 1752. It is of wood, painted white. It stands partially enveloped in a grove of forest trees, is surrounded by an old grave yard, and has an ancient and venerable appearance. It is on the site of a former one, and public service has been held on this venerated place for about two centuries. On this spot, within the walls of the church, Whitefield, David Brainerd, and the two Tennents, have labored and prayed.

At the time of the battle, a person, while sitting on a grave-stone in the yard, was mortally wounded by a cannon ball. He was carried into the church, and there died. His blood stained the floor, and remains plainly visible to the present day, a melancholy memento, in the house of God, of those dark and troublous times. Col Monckton, of the British grenadiers, killed at Monmouth, lies buried within six feet of the west end of the church. He was a gallant officer, and of splendid personal appearance. No monument is there, but his name rudely cut on the building, marks the spot.

The Rev. William Tennent, remarkable for his piety, and devotedness to the Christian cause, was, for a long period, the pastor of this church. He came from Ireland, in 1718, with his father, the Rev. William Tennent, and was educated under his tuition, at the Log College, on the banks of the Neshaminy. Being of a serious turn, he resolved to devote himself to the gospel ministry, and commenced the study of divinity under the direction of his brother, the Rev. Gilbert Tennent, pastor of the church at New Brunswick. While there, he was thrown into a remarkable trance, and remained apparently dead for a number of days. The following account is from a Life of Mr. Tennent, ascribed to Elias Boudinot, LL.D., and first published in the Evangelical Intelligencer, a work printed in Philadelphia.

"After a regular course in theology, Mr. Tennent was preparing for his examination by the Presbytery, as a candidate for the gospel ministry. His intense application affected his breast, and he had a slight hectic. He soon became emaciated, and at length was like a living skeleton. His life was now threatened. He was attended by a physician, a young man who was attached to him by the strictest and warmest friendship. He grew worse and worse, till little hope of his life was left. In this situation his spirits failed him, and he began to entertain doubts of his final happiness. He was conversing one morning with his brother, in Latin, on the state of his soul, when he fainted and died away. After the usual time, he was laid out on a board, according to the common practice of the country, and the neighborhood were invited to his funeral on the next day. In the evening, his physician and friend returned from a ride in the country, and was afflicted beyond measure at the news of his death. He could not be persuaded that it was certain; and on being told that one of the persons who had assisted in laying out the body, thought he had observed a little tremor of the flesh under the arm, although the body was cold and stiff, and he endeavored to ascertain the fact. He first put his own hand into warm water, to make it as sensible as possible, and then felt under the arm, and at the heart, and affirmed that he felt an unusual warmth, though no one else could. He had the body restored to a warm bed, and insisted that the people who had been invited to the funeral should be requested not to attend. To this the brother objected, as absurd—the eyes being sunk, the lips discolored, and the whole body cold and stiff. However, the doctor finally prevailed, and all probable means were used to discover symptoms of returning life; but the third day arrived, and no hopes were entertained of success but by the doctor, who never left him day or night. The people were again invited, and assembled to attend the funeral. The doctor still objected, and at last confined his request of delay to one hour, then to half an hour, and finally to fifteen minutes. He had discovered that the tongue was much swollen, and threatened to crack; he was endeavoring to soften it by some emollient ointment, put upon it by a feather, when the brother came in about the expiration of the last period, and mistaking what the doctor was doing for an attempt to feed him, manifested some resentment, and in a spirited tone said, 'It is a shame to be feeding a lifeless corpse!'—and insisted, with earnestness, that the funeral should immediately proceed. At this critical and important moment, the body, to the great alarm and astonishment of all present, opened its eyes, gave a dreadful groan, and sunk again into apparent death. This put an end to all thoughts of burying him, and every effort was again employed in hopes of bringing about a speedy resuscitation. In about an hour the eyes again opened, a heavy groan proceeded from the body, and again all appearance of animation vanished. In another hour, life seemed to return with more power, and a complete revival took place, to the great joy of the family and friends, and to the no small astonishment and conviction of very many who had been ridiculing the idea of restoring to life a dead body.

Mr. Tennent continued in so weak and low a state for six weeks, that great doubts were entertained of his final recovery. However, after that period he recovered much faster; but it was about 12 months before he was completely restored. After he was able to walk around, on a Sunday afternoon, his sister, who had stayed from church, to attend to him, was reading in the Bible, when he took notice of it, and asked her what she had in her hand. She answered that she was reading in the Bible. He replied, 'What is the Bible?' I know not what you mean. This affected the sister so much, that she burst into tears, and informed him that he was once well acquainted with it. On her reporting this to the brother when he returned, Mr. Tennent was found, upon examination, to be totally ignorant of every transaction of his life previous to his sickness. He could not read a single word, neither did he seem to have an idea of what it meant. As soon as he became capable of attention, he was taught to read and write, as children are usually taught, and afterwards began to learn the Latin language under the tuition of his brother. One day as he was reciting a lesson in Cornelius Nepos, he suddenly started, clasped his hand to his head, as if something had hurt him, and made a pause. His brother asked him what was the matter. He said that he felt a sudden shock in his head, and it now seemed to him as if he had read that book before. By degrees his recollection was restored, and he could speak the language as fluently as before his sickness. His memory so completely revived, that he gained a perfect knowledge of the past transactions of his life, as if no difficulty had previously occurred. This event, at that time, made a considerable noise, and afforded not only matter of serious contemplation to the devout Christian, especially when connected with what follows in this narration, but furnished a subject of deep investigation and learned inquiry to the real philosopher and curious anatomist.

The writer of these memoirs was greatly interested by these uncommon events, and on a favorable occasion, earnestly pressed Mr. Tennent for a minute account of what his views and apprehensions were while he lay in this extraordinary state of suspended animation. He discovered great reluctance to enter into any explanation of his perceptions and feelings at this time; but being importunately urged to do it, he at length consented, and proceeded with a solemnity not to be described.

"While I was conversing with my brother," said he, "on the state of my soul, and the fears I had entertained for my future welfare, I found myself, in an instant, in another state of existence, under the direction of a superior Being, who ordered me to follow him. I was accordingly wafted along. I knew not how, till I beheld at a distance an ineffable glory, the impression of which on my mind it is impossible to communicate to mortal man. I immediately reflected on my happy change, and thought: 'Well, blessed be God! I am safe at last, notwithstanding all my fears. I saw an innumerable host of happy beings surrounding the inexpressible glory, in acts of adoration and joyous worship; but I did not see any bodily shape or representation in the glorious appearance.' I heard their songs and hallelujahs of thanksgiving and praise, with unspeakable rapture. I felt joy unutterable and full of glory. I then applied to my conductor, and requested leave to join the happy throng—on which he tapped me on the shoulder, and said, 'You must return to the earth.' This seemed like a sword through my heart. In an instant I recollect to have seen my brother standing before me, disputing with the doctor. The three days during which I had appeared lifeless, seemed to me not more than ten or twenty minutes. The idea of returning to this world of sorrow, and trouble, gave me such a shock, that I fainted repeatedly.' He added, 'Such was the effect upon my mind of what I had seen and heard, that if it is possible for a human being to live entirely above the world and the things of it, for some time after I was that person.' The ravishing sound of the songs and hallelujahs that I heard, and the very words that were uttered, were not out of my ears, when awake, for at least three years. All the kingdoms of earth were in my sight as nothing and vanity; and so great were my ideas of heavenly glory, that nothing which did not in some measure relate to it, could command my serious attention."

PITIFUL.
Governor Matteson, of Illinois, who was himself the democratic candidate for the Senate, refuses to give Judge Trumbull his certificate of election, on the ground that having been a Judge of the Supreme Court of that State he is not eligible during the term for which he was appointed. He had previously resigned his seat on the bench, and was not, in fact, a Judge at the time he was chosen.

The Boston Atlas thinks this is small business, and will avail nothing to the Nebraska, who hold on to their power with a deathlike tenacity. We have yet to learn that the arbitrary giving or withholding of a certificate of election can determine the question of an election.

The people, through their legislature, elect their Senator, and all that the Governor can do is to certify to this fact.

He clearly transcends his powers in attempting to do more. The Senate will undoubtedly admit Mr. Trumbull to the seat to which he has been chosen, without the executive certificate, as no one questions that he has been chosen.—Buffalo Republic.

Deep Cultivation.

Charles Barnard, in the last number of the Farmer Journal, makes the following satisfactory communication on this subject. We have never had a doubt as to the advantages of judicious sub-soiling.

Having directed my attention somewhat to a deeper cultivation of the soil, and advantages arising therefrom, in the fall of '53, I purchased a Michigan Double Plow, and used it for plowing my oats stubble (first hauling out the manure which covered out a part of the field), and plowed it to the depth of twelve inches or more. Covering to that depth the manure and a greater part of the top soil, it gave the field a different appearance than it ever presented before. A sub-soil of five or six inches seemed but a poor prospect for a crop of wheat, and the question was frequently asked, "What do you expect to raise on that field?" However, I prepared the ground, and drilled in the wheat. It came up uncommonly well and soon covered the ground. As to the average yield per acre, I cannot say, not having threshed yet. But I am confident that on the manured part, there was at least 35 bushels per acre. To the remaining part of the field, I applied 300 lbs. of Jourdon's Phosphate of Lime per acre, which did not benefit the wheat much, but had an astonishing effect on the young timothy, forcing it to such a growth as to injure the wheat. The grain on this part was perfect and weighed heavier than the other, but the wheat did not shell out—hence less the yield. In the spring of '54, I used the same plow for corn, plowing the same depth. I plowed about six acres with it, leaving one acre in the middle of the field, for this I used a common plow, prepared the ground, and planted the corn. It came up equally well all over the field, and no difference could be seen for two or three weeks, when there was a marked difference in the color. That on the sub-soiled part was a pale yellow, and looked rather sickly, while the other was dark green, and looked much more like making a crop. This had a tendency to doubt on my part as to answering for corn. But as the season advanced, so did the corn, particularly that which grew on the sub-soiled part of the field, and in a few weeks there was also a marked difference in favor of that sub-soiled, and the yield was one third more per acre, and of a superior quality. I have also used it for vegetables, and find the same beneficial results. I will add that I have full faith in subsoiling, and believe the Michigan Double Plow to be preferable to any other that has come under my notice.

Garden Peas.

About the depth which peas should be planted; upon this point, experiments have shown that one foot deep, the time of coming up varies, from those sown three inches deep, only forty-eight hours, while the producing season is continued two weeks longer, owing to the fact, that the roots are kept cool—a necessary consequence to successful Pea growing.

Planted at one foot deep, they do not require earthing up, as in the case with those planted in the ordinary manner. Thus a considerable amount of labor is saved.—In very heavy soils, and those naturally inclined to be wet, eight inches deep may, perhaps be most advisable, as the soil where the experiments were made, was a clay loam, but well drained. Quebecs.—Ohio Farmer.

TO PRESERVE SMOKED MEAT.

How often are we disappointed in our hopes of having sweet hams during the summer? After carefully curing and smoking, and when sewing them up in bags, and white-washing them, we find that either the fly has commenced a family in our hams, or that the choice part around the bone are tainted, and the whole spoiled.

Now this can be easily avoided by packing them in pulverized charcoal. No matter how hot the weather, nor how thick the flies, hams will keep as sweet as when packed, for years. The preservative qualities of charcoal will keep them till charcoal itself decays.

Butter, too, put in a clean crock and surrounded by pulverized charcoal, will never become rancid. Try it.—Ohio Farmer.

HARROWING WHEAT IN THE SPRING.
The Michigan Farmer says, a farmer who had last spring a 40 acre field, that looked so bad, that had it not been sowed with clover, he would have plowed it up.—Instead he took a sharp strap harrow, and tore the land thoroughly to pieces, then rolled it down with a smooth heavy roller. That field improved and yielded from 15 to 20 bushels per acre.

A CONSCIENTIOUS DAVEY.—An old farmer, who feared neither God nor man, hired a devout negro, and to get some Sunday work out of him, he would always plan a case of necessity on Sunday, and on Sunday would put that point to the man's conscience. One morning old Davey proved refractory—he would work no more on Sundays. The master then argued that it was a case of necessity; that the Scriptures allowed a man to get out of a pit on the Sabbath day, a beast that had fallen in.

"You massa," rejoined the black, but not if he spend Saturday in digging dirt for de very purpose!"

AUTHORS' ATTENTION!

To encourage the literary talent of the country, as well as to secure the best available matter for their columns, the proprietors of the New York Standard have determined to award a prize of One Hundred Dollars for the best and most valuable article for the year, to be forwarded (post-paid) to their office on or before the 1st of May next. Said stories may be in any style, may be located in any country, or relate to any period; they must make not less than ten columns of the Standard. Each must be accompanied by the name of its author in a sealed envelope. All tales handed in are to become the property of the paper, and will be used in its columns if deemed worthy of publication. The award will be made without reservation, by a committee of gentlemen, whose high literary standing will be a guarantee of the sincerity and fairness of this proposal. Their names are G. F. V. Quackenbush, President; Editor, the N. Y. Literary American; Chas. C. Burr, Editor of the N. Y. National Democrat; and the Editor of the N. Y. Saturday Courier. Knowing that tale writers who complete for newspaper printers are not only paid for their services, but are also the property of the parties concerned, the undersigned would add their personal assurance that the strictest impartiality will be observed; the envelopes containing the authors' names will not be opened until after the award has been made, and the award will be a fair one if it is in the power of human effort to make it so.

Send in your manuscript on or before the 1st of May.

The undersigned may secure a regular exchange by inserting the above, together with this clause:

F. J. VISSCHER & Co., Proprietors,
346 Broadway, New York.

AGENTS WANTED.

IN every section of the United States, to sell the most elegant and useful Volume of the year. Sears' great work on Russia—Just published, an illustrated description of the Russian Empire. Being a Physical and Political history of the Government and provinces, productions, resources, imperial government, commerce, literature, educational means, religion, people, manners, customs, antiquities, etc., from the latest and most authentic sources. Embellished with about 200 engravings, and maps of European and Asiatic Russia. The whole complete in one large octavo volume of about 700 pages, elegantly and substantially bound. Retail price, $3.

This work has been several years in preparation, and will, it is believed, meet in the fullest acceptance of the word, the want so universally felt for reliable information on the history and internal resources of a country occupying so large a portion of the Eastern Hemisphere, and holding so formidable a position as to the present time to the rest of Europe and Asia; but of which far less is known than of any other European nation.

Also, a description of interesting works, entitled "The remarkable adventures of celebrated persons," embracing the romantic incidents and adventures in the lives of sovereigns, statesmen, generals, princes, warriors, travellers, adventurers, voyagers, etc., in the history of Europe and America, including sketches of over fifty celebrated heroic characters. Beautifully illustrated with numerous engravings. One vol. 400 pages, royal 12 mo. cloth gilt. Price, $1.50.

The undersigned publishes a number of most valuable Pictorial Books, very popular, and of a moral and religious character, that while good men may safely engage in their circulation, they will confer a public benefit, and receive a fair compensation for their labor.

To men of enterprise and tact, this business offers an opportunity for profitable employment seldom to be met with.

Persons wishing to engage in their sale, will receive promptly by mail a Circular, containing full particulars, with "Directions to persons disposed to act as Agents," together with terms on which they will be furnished, by addressing the subscriber, post paid.
